Parent & Child Playgroups

The Whidbey Island Waldorf School is offering on-going multi-week sessions throughout the school year for parents and their children approximately between the ages of 1 and 3 years old. The Rosebud and Dewdrop programs create a warm, nurturing, and supportive environment for children and parents to discover the joy of family and to discover some practical aspects of early child development.

Parents are guided through child observations while children are invited to join free and imaginative play. Circle time offers songs, verses, and movement for parents and children to experience together. A wholesome snack nourishes the body and a simple puppet story nourishes the soul. Parents and teachers work together to create a gentle transition from home to school.

In addition to the weekly playgroups, parent evenings and articles are offered for parenting support. Rosebud and Dewdrop parents are also invited to join the larger school community during events such as seasonal festivals and adult education workshops. They also get access to our excellent child and adult library.

Program Coordinator, William Dolde

William grew up in Pittsburgh and Connecticut and received a BA from Yale. In addition to receiving early childhood credentials at the University of Maryland and Waldorf certification at Rudolf Steiner College, William has taken RIE I training in Los Angeles. William has taught workshops for parent & child teachers at Sophia's Hearth in Keene, NH. In addition to teaching kindergarten in Maryland and Monterey, William has taught nursery and parent & child classes at the Waldorf School of Baltimore. He has worked as a parent coach and curriculum consultant for an adult education institute. He finds work with infants, toddlers, preschoolers and their families rewarding and just right. His greatest teachers are his wife Kelly and sons Liam (6) and Crispin (2).

THE WHIDBEY ISLAND WALDORF SCHOOL

Twenty-six miles northwest of Seattle, the Whidbey Island Waldorf School is situated in a pristine woodland setting surrounded by a land trust of 100 acres. The school is a community of children, their parents, teachers and friends coming together for the common good and education of our children and our world. It is a place to share in something very special and significant.

Offering classes for children from Parent/Child to Grade 8, the early childhood, elementary and middle-school programs are designed to meet the developmental needs of children in each phase of their development.

Each grade's teacher guides one class through eight years of schooling. This long association allows the creation of a family-like intimacy in the classroom, nurturing each child -- body, soul and spirit -- that they might bring their individual gifts into the future. Together they journey through an artistically integrated academic program that recapitulates the social and cultural development of humankind, awakening interest in the other.

"We love Waldorf kids. We reject some students with 1600s on their SATs and accept others based on other factors, like the creative ability Waldorf students demonstrate."

—Donna Badrig, Associate Director of Undergraduate Admissions for Columbia University
